

Melinda Tuhus is a mostly retired journalist, where she focused on environmental stories. She now volunteers with local, state and national climate organizations, including participating in several non-violent direct actions over the past eight years.