SPEAKER

DR. HAVA TIROSH-SAMUELSON is Regents Professor of History, Irving and Miriam Lowe Professor of Modern Judaism, and Director of Jewish Studies at Arizona State University in Tempe, AZ. She holds a Ph.D. in Jewish Philosophy and Mysticism from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem (1978), and a BA in Religious Studies from SUNY-Stony Brook, New York (1974). Prior to joining the faculty of Arizona State University in 1999, she taught at Indiana University (1991-1999), Emory University in Atlanta (1988-1991), Columbia University in New York (1982-1988), and Hebrew Union College in New York (1980-1982). Professor Tirosch-Samuelson explores the interplay of religion, science, and technology with a focus on transhumanism and the relationship between Judaism, science and medicine. Committed to inter-faith and cross-cultural conversations, Professor Tirosch-Samuelson has written essays on Judaism and ecology in reference books such as The Encyclopedia of Religion and Nature (2005) and the Oxford Handbook of Religion and Ecology (2006).

DR. MARTIN D. YAFFE, Professor of Philosophy and Religion at University of North Texas, holds a B.A. from University of Toronto and a Ph.D. from Claremont Graduate University. His research interests include political philosophy and Jewish thought. He is author of Shylock and the Jewish Question (Johns Hopkins University Press, 1997) and of Leo Strauss on Moses Mendelssohn (University of Chicago Press, 2012); co-translator of Thomas Aquinas, Literal Exposition on the Book of Job (Scholars Press/Oxford University Press, 1989); editor of Judaism and Environmental Ethics: A Reader (Lexington Books, 2001); and translator of Benedict Spinoza, Theologico-Political Treatise (Focus Philosophical Library, 2004). Among other works, he is also co-editor of Emil Fackenheim's Post-Holocaust Thought and its Philosophical Sources (University of Toronto Press, 2021). He is currently at work on a translation of Francis Bacon's New Organon, the philosophical founding document of modern science and technology.
