Dear authors, editors, and contributors,

I am writing to you with an invitation.

With Open Access week coming in October 2022 we were wondering whether you would be interested in submitting material to our open call for proposals for blog posts, videos, resources, or comments focused on this year’s theme: Open for Climate Justice.

This year’s theme seeks to encourage connection and collaboration among the climate movement and the international open community. Sharing knowledge is a human right, and tackling the climate crisis requires the rapid exchange of knowledge across geographic, economic, and disciplinary boundaries. Further details on this year’s theme are available at https://www.openaccessweek.org/theme/en.

As we do every year, we are asking our authors if they would like to write a blog post, record a short video (raw footage - editing will be taken care of on our side) or simply send us a few words that we might incorporate into a post ourselves. However, this year we would like to especially encourage those authors, contributors, and editors that have published titles on climate change, environmental sciences, sustainability, and conservation to collaborate with us.

Topics that we suggest for discussion:

- the link between climate justice and the climate movement and the international open community
- the impact of freely available OA resources on climate change research and the climate crisis
- your own perception of the importance of being environmentally responsible with the production and consumption of open knowledge and open infrastructure
- any other topic related to this year’s theme that you think might be of interest

Should you be interested in collaborating with us, please send us your submissions before the 1st of October.

Thank you so much for your time and hope to hear from you soon!

All the best,

Laura Rodríguez Pupo
